Dear Sir,

It is with great regret that I have to write you on so sad a matter. No doubt by now you have been advised officially and Dave will have written you. Your son N^o 127 Pvt W. Lilley met his death bravely in an engagement on January 4th when our regiment suffered very severely.

He was one of my best men and was the life of all his troop. His death has cast quite a gloom amongst us. His cheerful manner made him a favourite with both officers and men, and I regret his death very much. He was always willing for any work and although not present myself at the time of his death, his example on the field was a lesson many a man could follow and be a credit to his country. Allow me to sympathize with you and your family in your sad bereavement and I pray the Almighty to be with you in your sad affliction and make it easy to bear.

I trust nothing will happen to your other son and that he will be spared to return to you safe and sound. He also is a credit to his company and is a very promising young officer.

I must apologize for not writing earlier, but I have been in hospital since beginning of the month, hence this delay.

Hoping that the Almighty will be with you in your trouble and that Dave may be spared to you,

I remain
Yours sincerely

Chas. S. Schumann, Capt.

Message for Boer War Day 2015

The Boer War is significant in our military history and to our nation's development.

With the formation of the Australian Commonwealth on 1 January 1901, the soldiers and nurses from the Australian colonies became a unified force representing a new nation.

These men and women were the first to serve Australia in battle, and they did us proud. Their knowledge of the bush, their riding ability, exceptional shooting skills and the medical attention they provided earned them universal respect, and their loyalty to each other forged the sense of solidarity that lives with our soldiers to this day.

In a difficult war far from home, our Boer War veterans showed what it was to be an Australian. In this ANZAC centenary year, their deeds are as important and relevant as ever and they are widely regarded as the fathers of the ANZACS with many from the Boer War going on to serve in World War I.

As our nation was born, these servicemen and women were at war. We remember them for the sacrifices they made and for their contribution to our emerging nation.
